Good Morning Fellowship!

What if the greatest joy is not found in what you keep but in what you give? In Philippians 4:15–23, Paul celebrates a church whose open hands and open hearts became channels of God’s grace. When God’s generosity flows through us, both others and we ourselves thrive in the joy of generous living.

How to experience the joy of generous living:

1. Treasure the fellowship in the gospel of God as your delight 4:15-18

Questions for individual study, small group Bible studies, and LIFE Groups:

1. Where do you see God using your resources, time, or abilities to strengthen His work in others, and how might He be calling you to expand this partnership in the gospel (see 1:5; 4:15)?
2. The Philippians supported gospel work “once and again.” What habits or changes would help you practice generosity that is regular and intentional rather than occasional or reactive?
3. Paul said their generosity produced “fruit that increased to their account.” How does remembering the eternal impact of giving change the way you view your finances and priorities?
4. God promises to supply every need “according to His riches in glory in Christ Jesus.” How does that truth challenge your view of security, comfort, or financial fear?
5. The gospel reached even into Caesar’s household because of the Philippians’ generosity. Where might God be using your giving to reach people you may never personally see or meet?
6. What blessings, privileges, or resources has God poured into your life this season, and what is one practical way you could allow those blessings to flow outward to someone else?
